Yoga Classes Information

Yoga is a mind body practice that involves breathing, stretching, balance and strengthening exercises. It can help with stress and can enhance a sense of wellbeing. Some people find that it can help them manage the side effects of their cancer treatment.

Yoga classes at St George's Cancer Care Centre are taken by Kathryn Taylor. Kathryn is a qualified yoga teacher and is also one of our clinical psychologists.

What classes are available?

Yin Yang Yoga

Monday 9:30 am (50 minutes)

A class for those who have done a little bit yoga before or have a moderate level of fitness. This class is a mix of longer held poses (yin) to help release connective tissue and flowing poses (yang) to stretch and strengthen muscles.

Gentle Yoga

Monday 10:30 am (50 minutes)

If you can sit down on the floor and get up again you can do this class. No experience or flexibility is required! A great class to start with to work on stretching, balance and strengthening.

Gentle Yoga with a bit of Yin

Thursday 4pm (50 minutes)

No experience or flexibility is required! A great class to start with to work on stretching, balance and strengthening and with a bit of Yin to release connective tissues.

How much does it cost?

The cost is $5 per class. We have a multipass card which you can purchase at reception to make payment easier ($25 for 5 classes).

Where are the classes held?

Classes are held in the seminar room at St George's Cancer Care Centre.

When you come to class check in at reception and then take a seat in the waiting room.
